

integrate your mobile and office phones

Every company has a system for managing their internal office phones. With Orange you can now extend this to include your mobile phones. The idea is simple. With Orange Wirefree Extension, our virtual private network solution, we can integrate your mobile phones into your internal call network through a direct connection between your office system and the Orange network. This enables your business to make savings on any internal calls your mobile users make.

cost savings

When your Orange users make a call to each other, or the office, the system recognises it as an internal call and it is charged at a preferential rate, saving you money. All your company's mobile phones can help your business make savings through this service, and if they're not already registered with Orange we make it easy to transfer them over. We can even give you the choice of keeping all your existing mobile phone numbers, or starting afresh with a block of new numbers for your business.

internal extensions

As well as the benefits of cost savings, you can also choose short dial extension numbers for all your Orange phones. For example, they could be the last digits of the mobile number, or numbers chosen to match the numbers allocated to your office phones. Your mobile users can be contacted either through a short dial extension number, or by dialling the full phone number as before. They can also call each other and colleagues at the office using short extension numbers.

We have a range of options to meet your company's needs, but whichever you choose your mobile teams won't have to change the way they use their phones or be trained to work differently. Whether they dial the short or long codes to reach colleagues, the system recognises the call as internal, and your business will make the same savings.

business communication tools

With this service your mobile teams can also use their short dial extension numbers to access a range of Orange services. For example, they can use Conference Calling, simply and cost-effectively, from anywhere in the country.

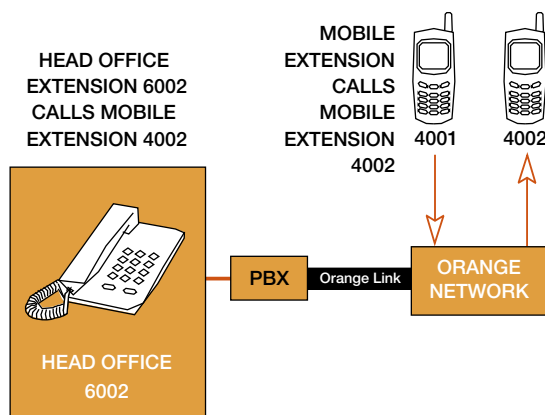

bring communications together

Orange Wirefree Extension uses a single direct connection to carry voice communications within your company. However, through our work with Cisco Systems, we can offer you a technology that enables you to do much more. Orange Link Voice and Data is a fully flexible, direct connection for voice, data and text communications. It makes it simple for your company to take advantage of a range of Orange services, including Orange Wirefree Extension. It is an intelligent system, so it automatically allocates the required bandwidth to each service, adapting to your business needs as they change, in real time. It will also help to reduce the investment required in infrastructure both now and into the future.

We will manage every aspect of installation and implementation, causing no extra strain on your IT staff. And after installation you can rely on the Orange business support team 24 hours a day. In addition, your direct connection will be monitored 24 hours a day, ensuring you always have effective communications.
